Dear Dr. Lederberg,

I'm sorry to say that I do not know of a study of Washington Heights in the period you lived there, although I do know of many people who would be interested in such an article.

There are two places that might yield the information I cannot supply. One is George Washington High School which might know of such a study, perhaps even done by one of their former students in years past.

Secondly, the Journal of American History lists articles and dissertations done on local history all over the United States. It is a tiresome task but perhaps some ambitious graduate student would want to go through the issues for the last ten years and see if anything could be found.

I hope this is of some help.

Sincerely,

Silma Benol
